After The Rain

I see the morning light flowing round your head.
I must leave you now,
but its something I dread.

We had a late night fight
over something that was said.
That would keep others apart,
but it draws us close instead.

After the rain
the sun shines down on the trees,
And dries all the pain
that showered down on you and me.

Like your rage last night
the storm does grow.
But like the howling winds
the rage does go.
And on the morning light
the clouds are gone.
And this love of ours
goes on and on...

After the rain
the sun shines down on the trees,
And dries all the pain
that showered down on you and me.

After the rain
the sun shines down on the trees,
And dries all the pain
that showered down on you and me.
